

PADI Specialty Instructor Programmes

Becoming a PADI Specialty Instructor increases your professional expertise, your employability and gives you further potential to earn more money. It provides you with extra skills that standard OWSIs do not have and affords you the opportunity to experience more varied diving conditions. This allows you further enjoyment and thus helps you to avoid 'burnout'. Taking a PADI Specialty Instructor course with SUB SINAI and our PADI Course Director does a couple of very important things for you: it allows you to teach that specialty immediately upon receiving approval from PADI, instead of having to wait until you've certified 25 students (as per any other method of application to PADI). Another great benefit is that you get hands-on training from our Course Directors who have a huge wealth of expertise and practical experience, not just in diving and instructing, but also in the business of marketing. We can pass on tips and ideas that will prove extremely useful when you have to market yourselves and your specialty.

Finally, you only have to complete ten dives in your chosen specialty/ies, ie Deep Diving, as opposed to twenty (as per any other application method). When you have achieved five Specialty Instructor qualifications you can then apply to PADI for your Master Scuba Diver Trainer rating, another highly sought after PADI Instructor credential.

OBJECTIVES:

Upon completion of this course you will be able to teach your chosen PADI specialty independently. We aim to educate you in a way that makes you better able to instruct students in the specialty of their choice. After this, not only will your own diving experience have increased but you will be a much better teacher too!

This varies depending on the particular course. Generally it is one day per specialty. All PADI specialties include academic training, presentations from our Course Directors, plus in-water work. Some specialties require one dive for qualification, whilst others require two.
